Father, What Did You Do!

"My son, when I to college went,
 I lived a life of ease;
 I worked in all the stores in town
 To pay tuition fees.

"But still I had a pile of time
 To fool away in play,
 And 'go the rounds' most every night,
 As we're wont to say.

"I never opened up a book,
 Or wrote a measley theme.
 "Those really were the good old days,
 With college life a dream."

"But, father, did you fool the profs.
 And keep away from pro?"

"My son, I don't remember, since
 I left in a month or so."

LAMENT

I bone and bone and then forget it.
My mind is nothing but a sieve.
I try to be a T B Pie —
But knowledge is so fugitive.

I drink and drink and then regret it.
Next day I have an awful head.
I try to beat John Barleycorn —
But each try lays me up in bed.

I rented a room and then sublet it.
I surely was a fool.
The land-lady has three grown-up girls —
Just home from boarding school.

I started a pool of Lucky Draw.
My system could not fail.
The cops broke up my little game —
I couldn't raise the bail.

I've tried a lot of things of late.
But without much success.
Where'er this line will lead me next —
I really cannot guess.

When you see a woman come down stairs in a party gown, you might think that she was walking in her sleep.

"Was the exam very steep?"
"Yes, a 60% grade."

RAH, RAH, RAY!

Soph: "Prof. Smith is sick to-day."

Frosh: "Thasso? What is the complaint?"

Soph: "No complaint; everybody satisfied."

He (at the Coly): "Are you dancing tonight?"

She: "Whatinhell do you think I came here for?"

He: "For Gym credit, perhaps."

A COMMON SPECIMEN

"The devil wouldn't take that bird."

"Yeh, he's even too wet to burn."

Undergrad,
Checks from Dad;
Sheepskin won,
Toils begun;
No more booze,
Must buy shoes;
College days,
Golden haze.

SUITS ME

Dad: "Thirty dollars is all you paid for that suit? Sounds pretty fishy to me."

Son: "Yes, it's herring-bone, you know."

When girls disappear and the police give it up, we always assume that they ran away from a man, with a man, after a man, or to become hosiery ads.

HIS NAME WAS S——

A fellow once said a loud d——,
Upon being struck by a r——;
He lit in some clover,
And while thinking it over,
He sat just as c—— as a cl——.

Now that the girls are "rollin' their own", we'll probably see advertisements as follows:—

HAND-ROLLED

Everyday "Hand-Rolled" are held higher in the estimation of the men who see them.

They are the standard of beauty.

They never disappoint — never fall — never change.

Best for 100% Turkish rarity.

You are proud to wear them in any company on any occasion.

The gentlemen smokers of America do prefer Quality to Quantity.

"Let your conscience be your guide."

CAUSE FOR ACTION

If you were invited to a dance,

As I was,

And when you were dancing with the girl,

As I was,

And you said to the girl, "Isn't the floor slippery,"

As I said,

And the girl said, "Yes, it is, when you hit it,"

As she said;

Now I ask you, would you dance with that gypsey again, or would you do

As I did? *

Considering the large number of snakes one sees with belles on their arms, it is surprising how little noise they make.

THE STAG AT EVE HAD DRUNK HIS FILL

The stag, he is a loathesome beast,
I hate him.

He's no darn good, no, not the least,
I hate him.

He takes your girl, he spoils your fun,
I'd like to get him with a gun;

Next time I'll soak him on the bun.

Gr-r-r! I hate him.

Soph: "Say, I've seen you around an awful lot."

Frosh: "Oh, you mean the Upper Field."

About the only thing left for the "anti-everything" to abolish is the wind. In the future we may see signs at all windy corners: — "Ladies, reduce speed when rounding this corner, tighten the clutch and advance with caution."

She hangs out in our alley, but oh — what she hangs out.

BURRO now offers you his Christmas Number. This is it, the last word in Christmas literature. With this effort, Burro hands out the season's greetings and warns his friends against making rash "I won'ts", as mortals are wont to do. Of course, he expects a certain amount of them to be made for the ordinary citizen doesn't get the real New Year's thrill unless he can feel like a martyr or a saint for a couple weeks. Burro is working out on six or seven that he hopes to word in a harmless way before the Old Boy passes out. But before we are forced by some kind friend to attend a New Year's party, where everyone is all ears around midnight so that they may hear or see the last digit change shape, we have Christmas to worry through. Yes, here it is Christmas again and we're all braced for that hideous assortment of neckties, rainbow socks and barber-pole shirts that we fall heir to every year due to the kindness of some loving relatives. Well, they're just saying it with colors, so here's a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year to all.

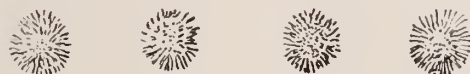

NOW that the great Metropolis of the United States has acquired its quota of illiterates and the Disarmament conferees have talked it over, and the old mystic turkey has long since been the last Thanksgiving of many, we find ourselves confronted here at Lehigh with an insidious parasitic growth of criticism of the most ruinous type. It is creeping upon us and taking possession of us by stealth. It is now time for all boneheads to betake themselves to the butcher shop and be examined. There is that old saying about people residing in crystal domiciles, should not be hurling pieces of granite promiscuously, lest said pieces of granite should light on some high-strung individual and be taken seriously, and that those same persons in the transparent houses would be endangering their health considerably.

The continual crabbing at the decision of the officials by the student body has been most unsportsmanlike. Intellectual culture preserves this form of enthusiasm for the less cultured, while in the sporting kingdom such enthusiastic sports are as welcome and as useful as a roll of paper towels would be to a seafaring nymph. The pinnacle of sportsmanship is only obtained when you have a group of enthusiasts with a common purpose, namely, to be a sport.

Don't let us be of a razzing nature. Let us take what we deserve, and let us not be noisily overjoyed at our opponents' misfortune; and then no man can say that the sporting blood of Lehigh doesn't run true blue.

With pleasure we announce the election of the following men to the Board: A. C. Horowitz, E. K. Thompson, E. M. Kendall, F. H. Leister, and F. T. Bumbaugh. Sharpen up your pencils for the competition, which starts with the January issue.

HOW TO MAKE YOUR COOK- ING A SUCCESS

(Submitted by the head chef of the Hotel
McAlbilt Castoria.)

1.—Select a dozen beady-eyed prunes, age being of no consequence, for no matter how youthful a prune may be it has wrinkles. Peel carefully and boil in cold water for one hour. Now place in incubator for one hour, secure old goulash, cut same into one-inch strips, French fry, flavor with rain-water and mix with prunes. Great care must now be exercised. Draw a picture of a small-sized hen, pluck feathers therefrom, knead carefully, soak in kerosene with the above mixture and run through a cement-mixer. Now hammer into one-inch cubes, and even if the cook does yell "foul ball", you really have a delicious, toothsome set of chicken croquets.

2.—Now, with the remains, flavor with bay rum, strain through two inches of boiler plate (use gas masks for this operation) and there will result a thick savory soup. When serving, remember the old maxim, "The flatter the plate, the fewer the soup."

The melody of love is soothing — or seething.

WANTED

*I want a girl who is good and pretty —
Not so blamed good that she cannot be witty.
I want a girl who is saving and thrifty —
But not so stingy she cannot dress nifty.
I want a girl who can talk well, of course —
Not one who will talk herself hoarse.
I don't want a pippin, a peach, or a pearl —
What I want, is a regular girl.*

Bones: "I'm off Jones for life."

Stones: "What's the matter?"

Bones: "The other day I told him that I had a cold, and he told me to go to Smith's Drug Store and ask for some cold medicine like he bought there."

Stones: "Nothing wrong with that!"

Bones: "Yes, there is, they gave me just what I asked for."

THE GRIND

Over a thumb'd and well-worn book,
The grind his gimlet strains;
The grind, a stinted man is he,
With convoluted brains;
And the wrinkles of his manly brow
Are scored with inky stains.

His hair is soft, and pale, and thin,
Run through with fingers pink;
His brow is wet with honest sweat,
You can hear the blighter think
As he pursues that greasy text;
He's a wise bird, is this gink.

Week in, week out, at morn and night,
You can hear his bellows wheeze,
You can hear him swing his slip-stick,
As he interpolates with ease;
You have to hand it to this bird,
At math he is the cheese.

And students coming home at dawn,
Look in at his open door;
They love to see him boning,
For they can sleep and snore;
And on the morrow glean the fruits
Of his learned dome once more.

Thanks, thanks to thee my learned friend,
For the knowledge thou hast sought;
Thus at thy flaming torch of love,
Our marks and grades are wrought;
Our thanks to thee in platitude,
By us in verse are brought.

And give you the college gate."

And tell her you are wet,
I wish that I could be there now
And these Damn blues forget."

WE'LL BITE—WHY?

Why do department stores have glass show-cases?

"THE VILLAGE CUT-UP, OR THE ADVENTURES OF RAY ZOR, THE TONSORIAL ARTISTE."

The story so far—Ida Gone, daughter of the well-known field magnet, Ded N. Gone, is kidnapped by the notorious Bologna Ring, composed of hard-boiled ex street car conductors, while her father is unveiling a statue of himself in front of the garbage disposal plant. Our hero, Ches Board, disguised as a gentleman follows the party in a sailboat and discovers the headquarters of the Bologna Ring, which is in a popular meat packing establishment.

Episode 78

Night fell with a crash and awoke our hero, who had slept from early noon in a dog kennel on the outskirts of the town. He stretched himself and broke a suspender button. Within the abode he could only hear the incessant grinding of the bologna machines. The rain began to fall in torrents. It also fell around the meat packing establishment. Far away on a distant hill one could see the Board of Health preparing for a raid. Our hero drew from his imagination a tangent line and threw it to a —— and made it fast. He also made himself fast, as he knew there was no dining resort in sight. He surmised, from the law of Clinging Bodies, that she would hold him tight when he had delivered her, yet she had never held him tight, because he always came to see her sober. We do not know what her sober referred to, so we shall pass it up. He scaled the wall with a ruler and finally reached the end of the tangent line. He found himself peering into a heavy oak shutter, carefully padlocked. He remembered—

EDITORIAL By Gad

The Eskimo controversy is rapidly rising its criterion. The origin of the Eskimo is traced back to the chronicle of one Joe Doorknob, a Hindoo Monk of the 17th Century, who writes: Silas Slivver, a prominent street-car conductor of this section, eloped with his wife to mid-ocean in a canoe, to try to get rid of her. However, he neglected to take into consideration the fact that he couldn't swim. So his wife held his head under until no more bubbles came to the surface. Then she paddled her own canoe to a strange shore, where she married a man with icicles hanging from his beard. "Eskimo" comes from the Greek, meaning "pitch, coco, etc."

FAMOUS STILLS FROM LIFE By Underwear and Underwear

We take great pleasure in placing these Four Famous Stills, which copped all Four Prizes at the Emaus Art Museum, before our readers. Our two intrepid and fleece-lined Photawgrafers, Underwear and Underwear, have stuck fast to us these many years.

GUIDE TO ABOVE PICTURES:

No. 1—"Still in Kentucky." A picture filled with the vivid joys of the bootlegger, and the aroma of the deadly Juniper Berry. 3 men died taking the picture.
No. 2—"Still in Milwaukee." A sombre, quiet little scene, filled with the pathos of rock care-taking and a desire to be free. At the Exhibition, strong men wept, and there was a gnashing of teeth at this picture.
No. 3—"Still in the Parlor." This picture was successfully snapped after Joe Underwear had lain two hours under the sofa with a foot on his neck.
No. 4—"Still Forever." It is such a scene as this in which a photographer can put his whole soul. "Heavy" Underwear spent precious moments arranging the above foot.

OUR ALL-ELASTIC TEAM COMES THRU By R. Grid Iron

It was an ideal day for a game. It had rained for 5 days and was still doing so. The referee rowed out to mid-field at 2:30 sharp and took soundings, announcing that at mid-field the water was 6 feet deep. The All-Elastics won the toss, but lost the coin, and chose the south end of the field because the water was only 7 feet deep there. The Dynamo A. C. kicked off. J. Banana, our versatile half-back, skinned thru 8 men for 6 $\frac{3}{4}$ feet. "Skin" Banana, his brother, peeled off 3 cubic feet thru tackle. "Red" Horse, our stellar Q. B., paddled his way thru a broken field for what looked like a sure touchdown, but was handicapped by being hit in an aimless manner by a canoe paddle. Then little Henry Eggplant swam under water for 40 feet and the lone touchdown.

The second half was marred by fumbling and requiring the assistance of expert divers to recover the fumbles.

In the fourth quarter 3 referees' bodies went below, and unsuccessful attempts to locate them were met with deafening cheers by the rooters. The line-up:

Tomato	R. E.	Joule
S. Beet	R. T.	Centimeter

YOU AND THE NAYBERS By Ellen Gone

A farmer from Yips Ridge, who insisted in smoking on a load of hay against his wife's wishes, returned in the evening with no moustache or eye-brows, and the iron-work of his wagon in a flour-sack.

NOT THE SHIP-MANT

"Are you going abroad on a fellowship?"
 "No, on a cattle ship."

Dear Editor:—

I almost feel ashamed of myself writing to you, as I should be able to take care of myself, being 84 years old, twice married already, and am now considering a third candidate. I am in a serious predicament and want your advice. When my second husband went to his hard-earned rest, he left me the homestead and one dollar and a half, provided, I not marry again. I am desperately in love with a man who has neither homestead nor a dollar and a half. I won't miss the money, but I hate to lose the homestead. I am at a loss as to what to do. Have you any suggestions?

GRASS WIDOW.

Friend Pasture:—

You were lucky to come out of two encounters with one dollar and a half. We have never had the experience which you have had, and therefore feel a little timid in offering advice. However, Hay, one good turn deserves another, so try another fling at it. But don't sell the old homestead, Pasture, give the d— thing away.

WILLIE BLINK, Editor.

Dear Editor:—

I have a very red nose and have tried several lotions for it, but it only gets worse. Can you help me.

Frantically,

BIERUN WINES.

Bierun, we lost ours by leaving the lotions alone. Have you tried external remedies?

Mrs. Nulywed: "You know the proof of the pudding is in the eating."

Mr. Nulywed: "Yes, dear, but remember, I'm no test-tube."

Many are called but few get up.

NOT MISSING A THING

"Have a cigar."

Mr. Narromind: "No, thank you, but I'll take a lead pencil."

I love to watch the lights that play
 Beneath a woman's lashes;
 At times they're quick; at times they're soft;
 They come in dots and dashes.
 Those tantalizing little lights,
 They keep you at a guess;
 Oh, lucky man, who knows the code
 Of woman's wireless!

GAS OR HOT AIR?

It was during the vacation following his Sophomore year at college that young Jack Truffley was a guest at one of the delightful week-ends at the Rollinstons'. The evening of his arrival he met and fell in love with Maryon Derey, a beautiful "deb" of that season. Throughout the rest of the summer he tendered his affections toward her; she received them with seeming pleasure and, we might say, open arms.

The evening before he was to return to his Alma Mater he called upon her. Toward the end of the evening, during a lull in her conversation, he said, "Maryon, the time has come in my life when my will can no longer be subservient to my father's. I told him to-night that I wasn't going back to college this year or any other year, but he said I was. What is there for me to do?"

"I've been wondering that myself," said she, "for, how could we get along without each other—if you should go back?"

"Darling, father told me that I either went back to school or left his home forever. Either way, I'd have to leave you and that is more than I can do."

"Oh, Jackie dear, what can we do? We've had such good times together—what—how—oh, I'm so broken up about it—I wish I were dead."

The youth's eyes suddenly brightened. "I have it," he cried, "we'll fool father—I won't go back—I'll kill myself."

The girl shrank back in horror.

Then in a hollow yet decisive tone she said, "Jack, I couldn't live without you. If you kill yourself, so will I." After a dreadful silence, "Well, since we've both decided to, let's do it together, here."

And so, locked in each other's arms, they awaited the slow death that was issuing from the gas-jet he had opened.

Just then her mother entered.

* * * * *

Twenty years later, Mr. John Truffley, newly-elected vice-president of the Lackawater Railroad, attended a reception to his daughter who had just made her debut.

While talking with Henry Parsue, the architect who was designing the Lackawater's new terminal, he noticed a familiar figure approaching. She smiled as she came up to him, then Parsue said, "Maryon, may I present Mr. Truffley—this is my wife, Jack."

The vice-president responded, "Your face seems rather familiar, haven't I seen you someplace before?"

"Why, yes—I believe we attended a little gas-sing party together some few years ago."

A snappy little maiden,
In days that are gone by,
Was wont to go a-wadin',
To aggravate the eye;
But wadin', as an art,
Is backed against the wall,
For Coles Phillips in "Hole-Proof"
Shows ankles, knees and — all.

Prof.: "Where is potassium chlorate found?"
 Repeater: "The fifth bottle to the right as you enter the Lab."

She: "I love to dance."
 He: "I dance to love."

Modern girls do not get red when they kiss,
 but the man does.

Love and moonshine make the world go
 'round, but the two should never be mixed.

EDUCATION

*Adventures in Romance I've had,
And each was more sweet than before;
But kissing, I've kissed with a smile,
And loving, I've loved you the more.*

*Of loves, I've had never enough,
For passion's a fashion with me;
I've learned much of women and guile
While learning your lover to be.*

*And while now I love only you,
You owe to the others a debt;
So, what they have taught me of love,
Be sure, never let me forget!*

BLOW NORMAL

Prof. (in blow-pipe class): "We will now try the silver coin test; if you haven't a coin, borrow one."

Blower (to friend): "Have you a nickel I can borrow?"

One: "Would you marry a widower?"

Other: "No, I prefer to tame my own."

SMOKES AND EATS

Father: "Are you getting the most out of your college life?"

Son: "Yes, I go to all the course meetings where they hand out eats and smokes."

Will the bird who shoved that putrid joke under the door of the Burr office come and redeem same. We've had to fumigate the office and shine the fixtures. You won't be robbing us for we have memorized this literary morsel.

OLD STUFF

Guide: "This tower goes back to William, the Conqueror."

Tourist: "Why, what's the matter with it, isn't it satisfactory?"

Beneath her feet a trace of sleet,
Alas, she seemed to slip,
She tried to stop, she fell kerflop,
We heard a startling cry;
A saint might cuss and make a fuss,
By righteous anger stirred,
But oh, to think a maid so pink
Would use that awful word.

Prof.: "What are the most unique mines in the world?"

Us: "Brass mines."

"Does Billy love that girl?"

"Yes, or—."

"Or what?"

"Or he wouldn't like her."

THE HELLUVIT

The lady just east of my flat
Possesses a shrill-singing cat,
The people below
Have a poodle or so,
Their barking is loud, but I bear it;
The man at my west has a flute
Which all through the night he does toot,
It's a hell of a strain,
But I still remain sane,
'Til the old dame above got a parrot.

I find I am able to laugh
In spite of each loud phonograph,
When the boarders have dates
And keep them there late,
It's trying, but I guess I'll endure it.
But ah, my dear lady above,
Though I'm gentle and mild as a dove,
You'd grow pallid in tint
If you had but a hint
Of just what I think of that parrot.

I'm sick of that maddening screech,
Which you may imagine is speech;
That bird in his cage
Makes me purple with rage,
And, as for his neck—well, I fear it;
I hate to be cranky and rough,
But listen,—enough is enough,
Put the muffler upon
That bird, or I swan
You'll be mourning the death of a parrot.

Prof.: "What course?"

Frosh: "L. E."

Prof.: "What's that?"

Frosh: "Lectrical Engineering."

NO USE

Daughter: "Going to bed, mother? Aren't you going to sit up and wait for dad?"

Mother: "It's no use, dear, I have such a bad cold, I can hardly talk."

VENUS HAD NOTHING ON HER

"Mother, may I go in to swim."

"Yes, my darling daughter, -

But do not swim like Annette K,

And don't show more than you ——!"

SHOULD OR WOULD

He: "Will you go to the dance with me to-night?"

She: "I should say not!"

He: "Well, what are you going to say?"

Bill: "I had my girl at the game last Saturday."

Bob: "Does she understand much about it?"

Bill: "No, she asked me what kind of car had the Minnesota shift."

*If there's one secluded spot
That I would like to own
And fence about, 'tis that small plot
Where my wild oats were sown.*

THE WINNING OF WORMA

The life of Nabisco, King of Arsolia, had been a nuisance to him ever since the unfortunate day when an oracle had forecasted that he would be stepped on by his step-son and killed. Until then, the king had liked his only child, Worma, very much, and had thought with pride of the time when he would bestow her both hands in marriage upon the richest and noblest of all the ouijies that came to woo her.

Now his plans were all balled up, and his only wish was to keep her unhitched — quite some task, for the maiden was quite keen, and Nabisco knew that the squirrely god of love would endeavor to find some way to trick him and bring his plans to zero. After much thought, Nabisco decided to lock Worma up in the ice-chest, around which he stationed many blind guards, to prevent anyone from approaching the captive princess.

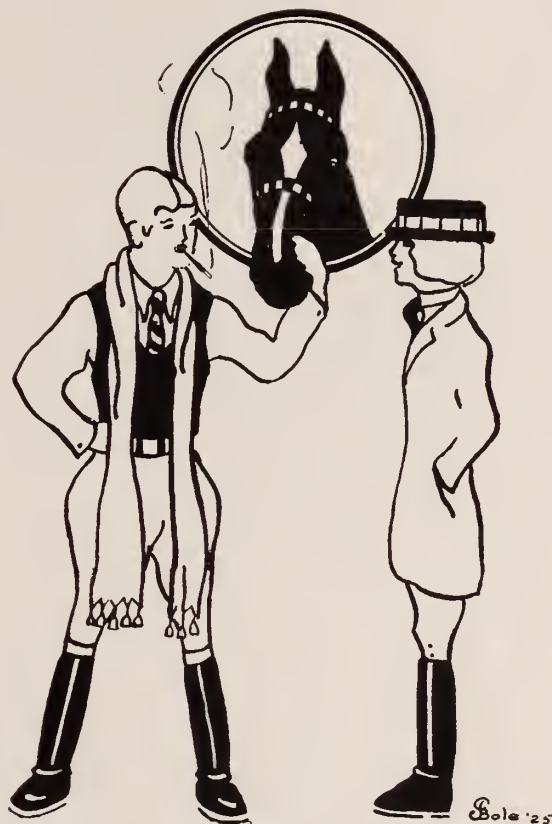

But although safely concealed from the eyes of men, Worma was plainly seen by the everlasting gods, former ice-men, and Whoser looking down from Crimpus, beheld her in all her loveliness and all her coldness. She was seated on her frozen trailer, her eyes shiveringly turned towards the city, where Broads of her age enjoyed freedom, and were allowed to get hitched when they pleased.

Whoser, pitying her icolation and admiring her keenness, resolved to go down and converse with her. To avoid being seen by the blind guards, he transformed himself into a cake of ice and was gently dropped in beside her by the ice-man, where his presence and warm conversation soon won the maiden's heart.

Lecturer: "In some parts of Africa a man doesn't know his wife until after he has married her."

Voice: "Huh! Why mention Africa especially."

Scented talcum powder is O. K., but hardly a substitute for a bath.

"Jack tried to kiss me five times last night."
"How conservative."

NOTETTE

*"You see her in the restaurants,
You see her on Broadway,
This night-time girl with painted lips,
Who leads young lads astray."*

*"Her flashy clothes and winsome smile,
Her dusky past of fame,
Draws foolish youth about her,
Like moths about a flame."*

*"Beware of her, oh foolish youth,
See not this tainted flirt,
Those smiling eyes, that silken form
Will only do you dirt."*

Wendall

"What does Jack think of your tennis?"

"He says that there is room for improvement, but I show good form."

AN END TO EVERYTHING

There was a girl in our town,
 She sure was a moral light;
 She never dared to roll her own,
 Or stay out late at night.
 She never had a bunch of beaux,
 Or tried to be a sport;
 She used no powder on her nose,
 Or wore her dresses short.

But now they've buried this little lass,
 Lots of good may her virtues bring;
 But the boys may no longer watch her pass
 And say, "What was that thing?"

Is a black brogue anything like a negro dialect?

SO SAY WE ALL

She: "Are there any words that thrill you like, 'I love you'?"

He: "How about, 'Dinner is ready'?"

A SOLILOQUY

*My pipe is out, no one's about,
 The time has come to study.
 I try in vain to work my brain,
 My thoughts are dim and muddy.*

*I look behind and there I find
 A row of ghastly flunks,
 While College rules and Summer schools
 Have cost me many plunks.*

*I look before, and blue and sore,
 The anguish fills my soul,
 For far and wide, on every side,
 Exams and quizzes roll.*

*While here I sit, the moments flit,
 A hard exam to-morrow.
 An "E" for me, I plainly see,
 Which I shall view with sorrow.*

*'Tis ever thus, no use to cuss,
 But why should I complain;
 'Tis plain to see, no hope for me,
 I'll light my pipe again.*

PRIMING NEEDED

Edna: "Don't you think that Charley is a little old-fashioned?"

Erma: "Why?"

Edna: "He was here two hours last night and never even tried to kiss me."

"How do you like my new socks?"

"Terrible."

"You didn't even look at them."

"Don't have to, I know your taste."

The proverbial fattened calf had nothing on some that the hosiery ads. show.

BREEZY!

The breezes played among the trees,
And gentle zephyrs blew;
I watched a girl go down the street,
And you'd have done it, too.
I've always had great fascination
For the use of my imagination,
And if yours works just like mine,
You'd have the wind blow all the time.

Never again will I invite a stuttering friend in for a drink. I explained to him how scarce the stuff was and how well it did its work, and then told him to say when. Before he could get that when off his chest I had filled his glass to the brim.

READ 'EM AND WEEP

"How she can roll her eyes."

"If you read that roll, is it a crap or a natural?"

A GLOOMY story,
PERHAPS an allegory.
THERE WAS a girl,
HER NAME was Liza;
SHE DRANK black ink

SHE GREW so thirsty

PRACTICE MAKES

"That fellow has some line of gab."

"Well, I wouldn't wonder, he's been talking practically all his life."

Tourist: "Hey!"

Cabby: "Look here, stop kiddin' my horse."

AND SQUIRM

"Go much to the theatre?"

"Considerably."

"Ever see Oliver Twist?"

"No, but I've seen Fatima wiggle."

To the Reader:—

We have written with vigor and zeal,
We have scribbled from morn till night;
The songs that we sing mean not a thing,
And we hope they will not bite.

Was there more that we could have writ,
In hope, or pain, or fun;
To give you the worth of a minute's mirth,
Or the joy of a work well done?

We have given you all we have,
For a critical glance or two;
It may ruffle your fur—if it's in the Burr,
But, it all was written for you.

He: "Can't you take anything seriously?"
She: "Yes, I took you once."

GRINDING CORN

Stude: "They say Jones works far into the night in the Chem. Lab."

Crude: "And then staggers up to his room."

A comedy to those who feel,
A tragedy to those who think;
But have you heard the church-bell peal
For him who of his own did drink.

Two can live on love, if love has a job.

"Where are you going this week-end?"
"I haven't fully decided."
"I have Philly decided."

"It's all in the game," said the hunter as he blazed away at the rabbit about a yard away.

WE WONDER

Jake: "Say, Jack, can you dig me up a girl for the dance to-night?"

Jack: "Sure—but why not take a live one?"

Prof.: "What does 'A' stand for in this reaction?"

Frosh: "Just a minute, I have it on the end of my tongue."

Prof.: "Well, spit it out, it's arsenic."

ACCOUNTING

When a fellow is allowed to muss a girl's hair, he considers it a net gain. She considers it a net loss.

*There was a young man from Elora,
Who married a girl called Lenora;
But he had not been wed
Very long till he said,
"Oh, drat it. I've married a snorer."*

Here's to the girl with eyes of grey,
Ask for a kiss and she'll turn away.
Here's to the girl with eyes of green,
Ask for a kiss and she'll surely scream.
Here's to the girl with eyes of brown,
Ask for a kiss and she'll turn you down.
BUT, here's to the girl with eyes of blue,
Ask for a kiss and she'll give you two.

BUT NOT SOON

Some day I'll be a millionaire —
But not soon.
And own great paintings, rich and rare —
But not soon.
Some day I'll be almost a king,
And nestle under Fortune's wing,
And then the bards my fame shall sing —
But not soon.

Some day they'll say, "He's worth a lot" —
But not soon.
Some day I'll own a private yacht —
But not soon.
I'll buy this place, and just to please
The poor over-worked Ch. E.s,
I'll graduate them with degrees —
But not soon.

Stage Manager: "There is something I would like to know about this photograph of the drinking scene in the play."

Photographer: "What is it?"

Stage Manager: "Was it made with dry plates?"

Here's to you, and here's to me,
Here's to the girl with a dimpled knee;
Here's to the man who fastens her garter,
'Tain't much, but it's a darn good starter.

Co-operative College Stores

Were Wallach stores student-owned and student-operated, with a permanent branch at each college, they could scarcely hope to equal their present efficiency.

As now constituted, they are four great New York Stores, reflecting the preferences in clothes, hats and haberdashery of several generations of College Men.

Here indeed is co-operation, and expressed not merely in the spirit of service and the high character of merchandise offered, but in a range of prices considerably lower than you ordinarily associate with such fine goods.

I'd say the city girl was shy

IF you have never written a Limerick here's a sample that will show you how it goes. For additional information, communicate with the Limerick Editor of this Paper.

HOW NICE OF HER!

A freshman, by name David Rex,
Went a-courting a girl who wore specs.
With her specs she saw Dave
Was in need of a shave,
So she gave Rex a Durham-Duplex.

DURHAM-DUPLEX

Intercollegiate Limerick Contest

$200 For the Best Limericks containing the words "DURHAM-DUPLEX"

First Prize	. $100.00 in cash
Second Prize	. 50.00 in cash
Third Prize	. 25.00 in cash
Fourth Prize	. 15.00 in cash
Fifth Prize	. 10.00 in cash

In addition to these prizes we will give a Durham-Duplex "Demonstrator" to every student who sends in a limerick. The Durham-Duplex "Demonstrator" shaves just as well as the regular Dollar model—the same diagonal stroke and the same double-edged, detachable, hollow-ground blades—the longest, strongest, keenest blades on earth.

For the Best Illustration of any Limerick we will give an Additional Prize of $25.00

Open to ALL Undergraduate Students

This is your opportunity to show your ingenuity and cleverness and also to earn some money. For any effort you will receive the best razor you ever shaved with.

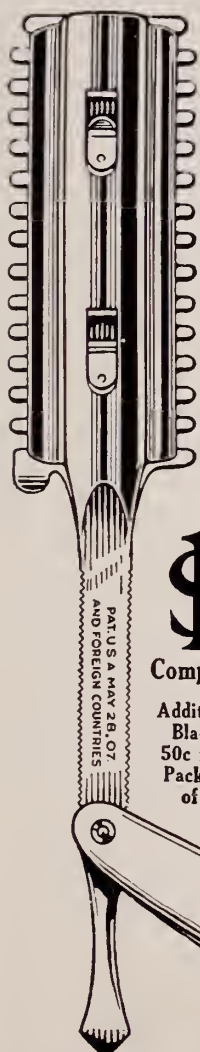

Any theme that is witty, novel or humorous is acceptable. There are a thousand subjects right in your own college life; but limericks that contain the actual names or nicknames of fellow students, or that reflect upon members of the faculty, are not eligible. It should be clearly understood that all limericks must mention the Durham-Duplex. From time to time the best limericks submitted will be published in connection with this advertising. We cannot promise to print all limericks submitted but we will print as many as possible.

Contest Begins At Once—Get Busy!

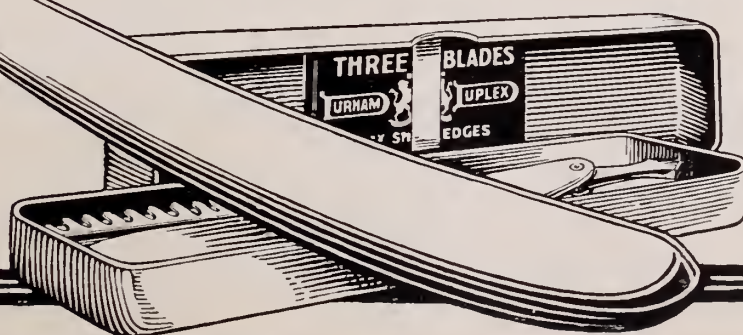

The winners will be chosen at the end of the college year and the announcement will be made in the Commencement issue.

All communications must be written on one side of the sheet only. Write your full name, name of college and college year at top of sheet. Send all communications to the LIMERICK EDITOR of this Paper.
